“ My cousin Stuart came to stay with my mother and me one time in Colfax, WI more than 60 years ago. In the country that long ago the phones were all "party-lines" where people could listen in on their neighbor's conversations. Stuart, being the charming flirt that he was, would sometimes say things to the young women he was dating that he might not have wanted to share with others. My mother tried to explain this to him, but being from a "big city", I think the concept of someone other than the person he had called being able to listen in was just unbelievable to him. I'm so sorry to learn about Stuart's death. While we hadn't been in contact for years, he was the last of my cousins.
